The Green Bay Police Department is proud to be a leader in Northeastern Wisconsin when it comes to law enforcement response to the needs of people in our community who suffer from mental illness, but there is much more we can do.

Our agency responds to approximately 85,000 calls for service each year and of those calls, it is estimated that 30-40% involve a person with mental health concerns. Thanks to some previous financial support from advocacy agencies like NAMI Brown County, we have been able to send a limited number of our officers to advanced mental health training such as the internationally recognized Memphis Model Crisis Intervention Training (CIT). That training benefits those suffering from mental illness, the police, and the community.

Our training budget is very limited, and mostly used to meet mandated stated and federal training requirements. Further, most officers receive very limited mental health training during the police recruit academy. Help us continue to improve our response to mental illness by considering a donation earmarked for mental health and crisis intervention training.
